JOB TO DO IN LONDON

Those close to Secretary of State Hull say he is not happy over the mission to London undertaken by energetic young Undersecretary Ed Stettinius. Originally, the trip was planned partly to please the British, who hinted that we had sent no important emissaries to London since Harry Hopkins' call on Churchill two years ago.

However, Stettinius is on the way to turning the mission into something really important. He is scheduled to discuss five important subjects with the British. They are:

1. Stabilization of the dollar and pound after the war.
2. A world bank.
3. Stabilization of commodities. This would mean the application of Wallace's ever-normal granary to all basic commodities such as tin, rubber, copper, sugar, with a system of buying and selling to keep prices stabilized.
4. Oil and the Near East. The United States wants to avoid a cut-throat battle for oil such as occurred with Britain after the last war and which is already threatened as a result of the Arabian pipe-line wrangling.
5. The future boundaries of Germany.

German boundaries were tentatively discussed at Teheran, but now Dr. Isaiah Bowman, famed geographer, has accompanied Stettinius to London to talk details. Bowman was Woodrow Wilson's geographic expert at Versailles, and some officials are critical of his chopping-up of Europe.

This imposing agenda has irked Secretary Hull. Apparently, it was pretty well arranged while he was in Florida. Also, Hull was always jealous of the trips Sumner Welles took to Rio, Rome, London and Berlin, and now it looks as if his new undersecretary might also be crowding him for the limelight.

MORE HORSE LEATHER

Representative Calvin Johnson of Illinois has been badgering the war department and the War Production board to get more harness for farm horses. With leather short, and harness buckle metal diverted to war production, harness is scarce. Also, the army has bought up tremendous supplies of harness.

In campaigning for more harness, Representative Johnson suddenly bumped into the fact that the army was only just now releasing from its Jeffersonville, Ind., quartermaster depot a total of 30,000 sets of harness — carefully stored away since the last war.

FREE RADIO TIME

Broadcasters are wondering how many other congressmen will follow the example recently set by Maryland's Senator Millard Tydings. At the close of his regular weekly broadcast, he announced that he would discontinue the series because he did not wish to subject the radio station, WBAL, to charges of unfairness during the coming senatorial campaign.

OIL SUBSIDY

The OPA has now recommended a system of oil subsidies to Economic Stabilizer Vinson ranging from 25 cents to 75 cents a barrel for all low-producing wells, namely those oil wells averaging nine barrels per day or less. This would give a subsidy to about 80 per cent of the nation's wells and would cost the government about $60,000,000 a year.

The plan was secretly worked out by some of the independents but, when the big companies heard about it, they raised such a howl that the little fellows backed out, stating publicly that they had not been cooperating with the government in devising the subsidy scheme.

However, it looks as if the plan would go through. Pennsylvania wells, which are the deepest, will get the highest subsidy.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ The United States is cutting off its nose to spite its face in regard to De Gaulle and the Free French. We are still freezing French funds in order to hamstring De Gaulle, which means that we will have to dig down into our own U. S. treasury to pay France's share of the UNRRA fund. Each nation is supposed to contribute a share to this world relief fund, and since we are tying up French funds, we will have to find the money some place.

¶ In Recife, thousands of cheering Brazilians welcomed Mrs. Roosevelt by singing "God Bless America" in Portuguese.

¶ A conspiracy is on to euchre another sizable hunk of the manpower problem out from under Paul McNutt. Undersecretary of War Patterson, rubber czar Bradley Dewey and WPB's production wizard, Charles E. Wilson, want to take the deferment of skilled industrial workers away from McNutt and put it under a special committee headed by Wilson.

¶ Reason for sparse publicity on the First Lady's Latin-American tour was the war department's refusal to let the newswomen who usually cover Mrs. Roosevelt go along.

Program and Installation At P.T.A. Meeting

The Campbell High Schol P.-T. A. met in the little theater last Wednesday for installation of officers for the coming year.

The meeting was opened by the pledge of allegiance led by Charles Cothran. The national anthem was sung by the audience, led by Miss Florence Smith, accompanied at the piano by Nina Page.

Mr. Gilbert Dumont then presented a number of his music students who delighted the audience with their solos. Dirk Johnson played a flute solo accompanied by Marcelene Benech; Lawrence Hartley played a trumpet solo, Le Secret, and Marcelene Benech played a piano solo, Minuet, Paderewski.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. H. F. Cousins, retiring president. She reported on the sixth district meeting held in San Jose recently, stating that Campbell High P.-T. A. had won the first award for its publicity book and for its program for the year. It also received the certificate of attainment for the thirteen goals accomplished.

Mrs. Castellano from the health department in San Jose announced the program to be followed in giving the tuberculosis tests and x-rays beginning on April 17. The P.-T. A. unit voted to assist in the follow-up program. Mrs. Cousins presented Mrs.Dan Clark and Mrs. Sylvia Jacobson, nurses' aides who will assist in the work.

Mr. Willard Van Dyke presented Mrs. Clarence Fagalde with a life membership award and spoke of the outstanding work she has done in the organization.

Mrs. Carl Field, chairman of the day, then introduced Mrs. W. F. Crattan, sixth vice president of the Sixth District who was the installing officer. The theme of her installation was the launching of the "Good Ship Campbell High P.-T. A." and she presented the ships' officers and its crew who were the elective officers and the committee chairmen consisting of the following:

Campbell Splits Red Cross Honors With Morgan Hill

A survey made by the national Red Cross organization shortly after the close of the recent drive for war relief funds revealed the gratifying fact that Campbell and Morgan Hill had topped their quotas by the largest margins of any other rural communities in the Pacific area, which includes the seven western states and Alaska.

This reflects a true spirit of sacrifice on the part of the people of these two honored communities, and furthermore, it is a record of which the organizers and workers in the drives may well be proud.

The publicity book of the unit was awarded first place, and the Certificate of award was presented for the outstanding program, which is to be on display at the state convention in Fresno in May.

Van Dyke Resigns As High Principal

JAMES W. DENT, DEAN AT SAN JOSE HIGH WILL FILL TOP POST AT CAMPBELL.

The trustees of Campbell Union High school are announcing the resignation of Willard H. Van Dyke as principal and district superintendent, effective as of July 1.

James W. Dent, who is vice principal and dean of boys of the San Jose High school has been elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Dent has held his present position in San Jose for several years and has a fine record of achievement both in his work in the school and as an active participant in Boy Scout and Hi-Y work and civic activities. He has a wife and two children, a boy and a girl.

It was with reluctance that the board accepted Van Dyke's resignation, as in the six and one-half years of his administration the new buildings have been completed and placed in use; the budgets kept very reasonable for the high standard of students qualifications maintained, and the whole-hearted participation of the student body and faculty in all the many phases of war efforts asked of the school.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Van Dyke have participated actively in civic and club affairs, he having completed a year as president of the Kiwanis club and Mrs. Van Dyke the acting president of the Country Woman's club from which she will retire in June.

The new school of which Van Dyke becomes the principal and district superintendent is the Tamalpais Union High school which includes almost half of Marin county, and is located not far across the bay near Mill Valley. Comprising the district are Sausalito, Mill Valley, Bolinas, Corte Madera, Ross, Kentfield, San Anselmo, Fairfax, Tiburon and Belvedere making it a very wealthy district with an enrollment of 1500 pupils, a faculty of 70, and some 20 employees.

Nurses Aides Course to Star

Mrs. W. R. Frost, chairman of the nurses aide committee for the San Jose chapter of the American Red Cross announces the opening of a new evening class on May 1 for the instruction of Red Cross nurses aides.

This instruction will be given at the San Jose hospital three evenings a week. Mrs. Frost will interview those interested in taking the course on Friday and Monday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., at the Red Cross headquarters, 393 South Second street.

To be eligible for the enrollment the prospective nurses aide must be a high school graduate or the equivalent and between the ages of 18 and 50. "The need for this training is very great and too much cannot be said for the valiant work the nurses aides are doing throughout the country," said Mrs. Frost. "The thought that the family of the man at the front is being well cared for makes a better soldier, and it is through the continued recruitment and training of nurses aides to help in the hospitals where the shortage of trained nurses has been so keenly felt this is made possible."

Persons wishing further information may call Columbia 2068.

Rubinstein's thrilling program includes Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata, works of Brahms, Chopin, Villa Lobos, Granados, and Albeniz.

Sons o' Fun, the scintillating musical Olsen and Johnson extravaganza, plays one performance in San Jose on Sunday evening, April 30. The huge production shown here is the same as that offered at the 46th Street Theater, New York, during the final stages of the two-year Broadway run.

Life With Father plays one night in San Jose on May 28.

Tickets for all the named attractions are on sale at the Denny-Watrous box office, civic auditorium.

FBI Was Ready Before Pearl Harbor: Wine

Special Agent Louis D. Wine of the FBI enlightened the members of the Kiwanis club on work of the organization Tuesday when he was guest speaker, introduced by Ira Grim, chairman.

Wine stated that previous to Pearl Harbor the FBI had already investigated groups interested in subversive activity, and as a result, when the country was attacked on Dec. 7, the FBI moved in right away. Thus it is felt that the enemy were thrown off base and their planned system disrupted.

The speaker mentioned several incidents investigated by their office, some of the better known cases already mentioned sensationally in public print.

All reports made to them are considered serious until found to be otherwise, on the possible chance of getting one serious case among the thousands not serious.

He reported alarming figures on juvenile delinquency; the increase especially in young girls in bars and "juke joints."

Violations of the Selective Service acts are placed on the shoulders of the FBI, and at present occupy most of their time.

A brief period was devoted to questions from the club members.

Visitors were George Place, Los Gatos, Mervyn Kaney of Santa Cruz, and T. A. Cutting of Campbell.

Next week being Public Schools week, high school students will present the program, with W. H. Van Dyke as chairman.

Solvency Battle Ahead

The fact that our citizens and industries are aware of the danger involved by failure on our part to devise equitable and far-reaching tax measures which apply to virtually every earned dollar and every sale of goods, in order to prevent our country from being "bonded to death," is shown by the resolution recently adopted by the National Tax Conference, Associated State Chambers of Commerce. The resolution states:

"The Associated State Chambers of Commerce realize that as the existence of the nation depends on winning the war, the existence of democracy as we know it, and private enterprise and private property as we know it, depend on the ability of private enterprise and the people to pay for the war.

"Therefore, the Associated State Chambers of Commerce favor the highest possible taxes for business, industry, and the people as a whole, consistent with the preservation of enterprise in a strong and healthy condition and able to meet the continuing heavy tax burden of the future, and consistent with maintaining the morale of the people.

"At the same time the Associated Chambers of Commerce go on record not only in favor of the elimination of every unnecessary governmental expense, but in favor of the elimination from every tax bill of any and all provisions therein aimed not for government revenue but for control of business and individuals, which are unnecessary, undesirable, and unfair and some of which provisions result in actual loss of revenue to the treasury."

Agricultural Army

An agricultural army of 12 million men, women, and children will be needed this year if we are to win the battle of food production here on the home front. This means that four million people—500,000 more than last year—must be recruited in addition to the eight million regular farm operators, their families, and permanent hired hands.

A special appeal is being made to women office workers to join the women's land army of the U. S. crop corps. Last year a quarter of a million American women wore the uniform of this army by working a month or more in agricultural production. This year the term of "enlistment" has been cut to two weeks or even week-ends in order to raise the number to 400,000.

With food goals four to six per cent higher than in 1943, the battle of production will be harder than last year. However, great quantities of food have already been produced under the handicap of machinery and labor shortages and we have confidence that we shall not fail this year. In fact, our whole large-scale food production and distribution systems have carried on remarkably well under adverse wartime conditions.

Now is the time when most people are thinking about their summer vacations. Why not plan to spend it out in the country helping Uncle Sam's farmers turn out one of the most important weapons of victory? It will be good experience, it will return you a profit, and it will give you an inner satisfaction that you have made a real contribution to the war effort.

Soldier Students

American soldiers are attending English "public schools." Groups from the U. S. army are living with students at Eton, Christ's Hospital and Charter House, sharing their dormitories, games, meals and discipline. Special courses on political and social problems of Britain have been provided for the men in place of the normal school subjects. Arrangements were made because the Americans were interested in these British institutions.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

LOVE begins at 40 in the movies these days, which is mighty lucky for our male stars. Collegiate romance went out when war came in. So the majority of men on the screen today with box office names, who get the glamour gals for the final clinch, are all over draft age. Some even get the bobby sox set drooling.

Ever since Uncle Sam's initial call for help in the various United States armed forces, Hollywood's younger actors have been exchanging civies for uniforms. With Jimmy Stewart, Ronald Regan, Glenn Ford, Victor Mature, Bob Taylor, Tyrone Power, William Holden, et al in there pitching for the destruction of Hitler and Tojo, the studios were yowling for male names to woo such lovelies as Janet Blair and Susan Peters on the screen.

James Stewart

Janet Blair

Replacement of sturdy heroes was a problem. When producers looked around for new lovers they found the most eligible and best known in the ranks of older players, undisturbed by the selective service act. There was a definite question mark for a while as to how the high school and college gals would react to older men in romantic roles.

A Quick Switch

After a try or two, and a look at the grosses, fear fled. From then on men who had played character roles for years started to pitch woo. Others who hadn't held a heroine in their arms before a camera in years were suddenly given the opportunity to enfold 'em in long and passionate embraces.

There was plenty of love light in the old boys yet.

It was all right with everybody, including the ladies. It seems a man's a man so far as screen love-making goes.

Getting On

phrey Bogart left to play love scenes with young cuties. Well, they do, and very well, too. Gosh, haven't they had practice? But no mention has been made about our mature leading ladies and how hard it is to find young men to play opposite them. Suppose we take a gander. Our top screen stars today are Greer Garson, Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Irene Dunne, and you must admit they've been around quite a while. To me that's healthy and a sure sign that movies are growing up, because in the old days if a girl was over—say 18—they talked about her life as being over—or at least unable to attract attention.

Returning From Mexico

Miliza Korjus of "The Great Waltz" fame begins her American concert tour October 4. She's been living in Mexico City. When she arrives here she'll be an American citizen. Many think "The Great Waltz" was Metro's most beautiful musical. I'm not sure they aren't right . . . Lewis Milestone done up in umpteen sweaters running up and down Beverly Hills to take off that poundage, streamlining for action. I can remember the day when he hired a man to wake him and actually pull him out of bed. Joe Cotten plays the lead opposite Ginger Rogers in "Double Furlough," so Dore Schary's search is ended. Cotten goes into Alfred Hitchcock's next but that isn't ready yet.

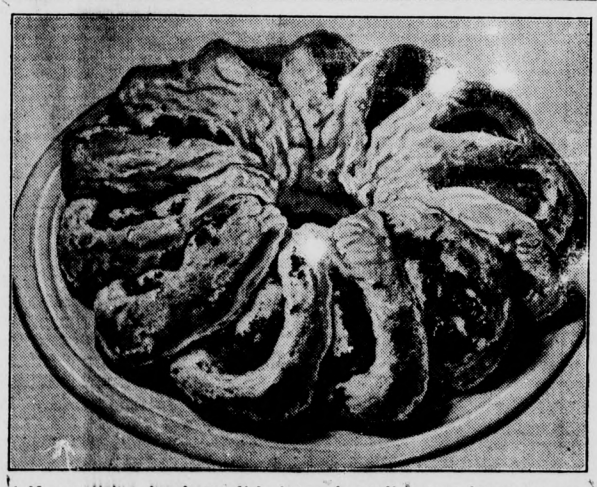
Waits and Gets Hedy

Ray Bolger waited for the deal he wanted and has signed a term contract with Metro. His first will be "Holiday in Mexico," opposite Hedy Lamarr, with Arthur Freed producing . . . Sam Goldwyn borrowed Walter Slezak from Twentieth for "Sylvester the Great" with Bob Hope. He'll play a corrupt governor of a Caribbean island. Sam had a Gallup poll taken about the title for that picture. One that came in first was "Princess and the Pirate." That's the one I'd go for, too . . . Metro's thinking of doing the life of Robert Louis Stevenson. I've wondered why that wasn't done before. What a great man! I hope they'll let Stevenson's grandson, Austin Strong, author of "Seventh Heaven," do the screenplay. He's at Santa Barbara visiting his mother.

Fame at Last for Hedda

The Bed Pan, Fort Bragg's sheet, wants my puss to hang in their rogue's gallery. G. I. Joes asked for it . . . "Goldwyn's Golden Touch," running in a current magazine, is one of the better stories about Sam, but the real yarn about Sam Goldwyn hasn't yet been written. His golden touch started when he married Frances Howard in 1925. I knew him before—and after . . . Metro finally has a good script from "Without Love" for Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn.

Meat Ring is Festive Low-Point Entree



AN appetizing luncheon dish is this crusty brown meat ring to be served with a rich meat gravy, or a savory tomato or mushroom sauce. Yet the recipe requires only two cups of ground cooked meat so it's a thrifty entree in both ration points and price.

This meat ring is an excellent way to utilize leftover cooked meat, whether beef, lamb, veal, or ham. If you'd like to serve the ring, but haven't any leftover meat on hand, use browned hamburger or ¼ pound of dried beef.

The biscuit ring dough is made with blended shortening, a versatile product prepared by scientifically blending meat fats and vegetable oils. It has excellent shortening power, makes tender, flaky biscuits and gives foods an appetizing richness. Remember that fats are an important part of a well-balanced diet, so budget the family ration points to allow the purchase of both table spread and cooking fat each week.

There was a time when some thought that fats were indigestible, but science has come to the rescue and food experts today tell us that fats are actually easily digested, both table spreads and cooking fats. It's comforting to know that products like blended shortening, that make foods taste so rich and good, are also good for us.

With this flavorsome meat ring serve a buttered green vegetable, as broccoli, green beans or peas, and a fruit salad, such as apple and celery salad. This ring will serve six persons.

Meat Ring

¼ cup blended shortening
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup milk

Filling

2 cups ground, cooked meat
1 cup white sauce or gravy
¼ cup diced green pepper
2 tablespoons diced onion
Salt, pepper

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture is the consistency of coarse cornmeal. Stir in milk to form a stiff dough. Turn onto lightly floured board or pastry cloth and knead gently 3 or 4 times. Roll out into rectangular sheet about ½-inch thick. Spread with meat filling. Roll up jelly roll fashion and shape into a ring. Place on baking sheet and cut with scissors at 1-inch intervals almost through ring. Turn each slice slightly on its side. Bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) 25 to 30 minutes.

For a brown gravy, blend 4 tablespoons of flour with 4 tablespoons meat drippings. Add 2 cups of meat stock, water or milk. Cook slowly to thicken, stirring to keep smooth. When thick and bubbly season and serve. If a mushroom gravy is desired, wash and clean mushrooms, slice, brown in fat before making gra-

Kathleen Norris Says:

Something (Valuable) for Nothing

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Don't put it off a moment longer. Open the telephone book now to "Red Cross" and find out how soon you can enroll.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

DID you ever stop to consider that all the things we women are learning to do in this war—things our mothers never dreamed of doing, will be useful in time of peace? These dark days through which we are living are providing you with an opportunity to be instructed in some line of work, to gain some experience that will be useful to you all your life.

Don't miss it. Because we are going to be a pretty specialized people after the war, and you may find yourself paying a good round sum for the lessons you may have for nothing now. Courses of all sorts are open to you, you can choose what appeals to you most. Don't be one of the women who are going to feel left out of everything one of these days because they acted in wartime exactly as if it was peacetime.

The opportunities of men and women are more nearly equal today than they ever have been. Thousands of women are going to retain after the war, specialized jobs for which they have proved themselves adapted. And there are going to be so many new jobs, in the great uprush of reconstruction everywhere, that there will be an unprecedented demand for labor.

But meanwhile, if you are not in the uniform of a WAVE or a WAC, if you are not on the assembly line or serving the wounded in some hospital, take immediate advantage of the course in Home Nursing that your Red Cross is offering you. The world would be a better place to live in if every girl took this course as a part of her high school training, and perhaps some day it will be included in high school work. It takes 24 hours, divided into twice-a-week periods. Twenty-four hours! and then you have something that will be of inestimable advantage to you all your life.

Women for Emergency Nursing.

Something for nothing. Yes, that is one of the strange fruits of a great war. Doctors and nurses are cruelly overworked these days, and as a result the always resourceful Red Cross is enlisting thousands of other women for emergency service at home.

What do you learn? Well, you learn a hundred simple little rules about keeping the family well. You learn about things that cause illness, symptoms of sickness, how to take temperatures, pulse and respiration, and how to use sickroom conveniences.

You learn about getting ready for the baby; care of the new baby; keeping an invalid's bed fresh and comfortable; the use and purpose of medicines, and above all, immediate action in emergencies.

Oh, when those emergencies arise, how we wish we'd gotten ready for them! When the broken wrist, the sudden inexplicable spasm or chill confronts us, how utterly stupid—how criminally negligent we feel when all that we can do is wring our hands! When the small senseless body is rescued from the swimming pool someone may indeed run to the telephone for the doctor, but if the doctor is out on morning rounds a precious life may flicker out before he arrives.

Short Course, But Long Joy.

There is no woman, old or young, teacher, mother, housewife, professional, who will not be an infinitely more valuable citizen for taking this course. There are evening classes. Twenty-four hours out of your free time now may be worth thousands of hours of happiness to you some day.

Some years ago a small boy on our ranch was planing the bottom of a door—for no conceivable reason except that he was 12, and it seemed a sound idea to him, the tool slipped and he got a deep gash in his groin. A girl who had taken a first aid course was visiting us and she very quietly saved his life, for no one else knew what to do. She closed the arterial wound with a tight pressure of lint and fingers, and told us what to tell the doctor, seven miles away. The boy is a doctor now, with boys of his own; he is doing a good job, and he and his country have to thank a 17-year-old girl who knew.

Another instance of what a very little knowledge will do is in the way babies are given their bottles nowadays. Thirty years ago we all had "colicky babies." After their morning meals they had sufficient fussing and handling to keep them comfortable, but after their six o'clock bottles, how they yelled!

Then, someone discovered the mid-meal bubble. And with the arrival of the bubble a million shrieking nocturnal infants turned into a million serene little bundles tucked down into blankets and off to dreamland without a peep. It was divinely simple, but you had to know it.

Other things just as simple are waiting for you to discover them. Don't put it off a moment longer. Whether you are 14 or 74, open the telephone book now to "Red Cross" and find out how soon you can enroll.

Babies don't have colic nowadays.

BEING A GOOD NURSE

Every woman should know a good deal about nursing and first aid, if only to care for her family. Now in wartime, when doctors and nurses are scarce, and there are so many extra dangers and difficulties, it is especially important for every woman to be prepared.

In many communities, the Red Cross is offering a short home nursing course, consisting of 24 hours of class time, divided into twice a week periods. The course covers care of babies and young children, symptoms of illness, simple nursing techniques, first aid and many other subjects.

Taking this course may prepare you to save a life—perhaps that of someone most dear to you. It will give you a sense of self-confidence and save you many worried hours. The course is free. It will be worth many times the effort you put in to take it.

Need for Waste Paper Is Now Greater Than Ever, Says WPB

The shortage of paper pulp and the increased industrial use have combined to reduce the paper towel supply. The War Production board has reduced the amount of toweling made for home use from 100 to 80 per cent of the 1942 production.

Waste paper is essential to the war effort, as it directly replaces pulp in the production of new paper and paperboard containers which are used to make and ship many war weapons and supplies.

Horning In

By JEAN CAMERON

McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

WHEN the car came abreast of the running girl in the trench coat the horn sounded raucously once, twice. She hesitated a moment, tugged her hat over her loose curls and jumped in. "So chemicals help drafting—thank you," she said.

The sandy-haired man behind the driver's seat looked at her gloomily. While her face was unfamiliar, he knew draftswomen had been employed for some weeks now. "How far, Miss—"

"To the highway intersection, please. Kay Farnham. I'll be quiet," she added, after another glance at the strong chin. "I know you're planning explanations for the Government inspection committee tomorrow."

The chin stiffened perceptibly. So the Government committee was coming, eh? The drive was a silent one. At the highway Donald crawled out and opened the door for his passenger. She smiled. "You're the first man to do that in two months, Mr. McAllister. And—and I am highly flattered that you took me home." He did not realize that the girl remained standing in the street until his car vanished from sight. She had noticed him in the halls and offices for some time.

McAllister was angry, with a cold, calculated, frightening rage that had been developing for many weeks. Let Wilson run the chemical department as he ran and bullied everyone else—all right, just so long as he kept out of McAllister's way; let him have the soundproof laboratory, priorities, assistants—all right. He himself would work overtime, be underpaid, refuse better offers—all right. If this experiment succeeded—if he could work it out and it was accepted, it would be worth all of Wilson's sneers. He'd have done his part.

But the Government inspectors were coming tomorrow and not to test his model or his method! Well . . . his temper at a fine edge, he swung and headed back to the factory.

In spite of his pugnacious look, his height and his square shoulders, there was a mildness about Donald—something in the color of his hair, the blue of his eyes, his general absent-mindedness—which led people to think him timid. He had never cared, for he believed in attending strictly to his own business. And yet perhaps it was Cornelia's treatment which had helped to produce his present fury.

Cornelia believed in Cornelia first, peace or war. She was soft, blonde, helpless, appealing to big men. She demanded things and got them. And now that so many men were gone she had been concentrating on Donald with excellent results.

There was a quick hush as he entered the office, a bending of heads back to work. He glanced toward his desk; his lips tightened. "I thought I told you to stay out of my things, Wilson," he said slowly, striding over to his private corner.

A beefy, self-confident man swung about. "I was looking for a pencil," he grinned, nonchalantly ignoring the fact that two projected from his breast pocket. Donald controlled himself with a conscious effort and closed the desk top. He felt rather than saw Wilson's foot moving the wastebasket into a tripping position behind him, and kicked backward so violently that the basket shot between his annoyer's legs and he fell headlong.

He was up in an instant, furious, his fists lifted, but Donald's look lowered them. "Can't you take a joke, McAllister?" he asked feebly, realizing that his long domination of the office was crashing and that the story would soon sweep the whole plant.

"No," snapped Donald. He tramped across the room and slammed the sales manager's door behind him. "No, Mr. Bentley, you're not too busy to listen to me," he said, and poured out every demand he had formulated during his drive—better instruments, additional quarters, storage space, and full hearing before the committee. "I came here to work," he concluded. "If I can't do that here I'll go where I can. Pay Wilson what you want for making a general nuisance of himself. Give him any title you like—but let me do a good job!"

"Of course," gasped the sales manager. "Naturally. We thought you were quite satisfied, Mr. McAllister. We'll have a new contract for you in the morning. We . . ." Donald turned and left.

In the outer office a stenographer came up to him. "A lady has been calling," she reported. "Miss Cornelia Adkins, she said."

Donald did not pause. "Tell her I haven't come in."

In the lab he pulled on his rubber gloves. He was quite calm now. He would get right at that new solvent. But first—he pulled off the gloves, made a notation on his calendar—"Take girl in drafting room to lunch after committee report tomorrow."

Nice girl, he thought, arranging bottles carefully on the sink. He'd tell her—no, women were funny. Better not tell her he hadn't meant to pick her up, that when he bent over to rescue his fountain pen from the floor of the car he had accidentally pressed the horn.

NEW WORLD A-COMING
By Roi Ottley

Here is a book written by a negro, a native of Harlem, about negroes. Roi Ottley has lived in Harlem and other key centers and visited the West Indies. Born in New York, he went through its public schools, spent three years at the University of Michigan, and two more studying law. After a few years as redcap, bellhop and soda jerker, he took up newspaper work and spent seven years covering Harlem as a reporter, editor, and columnist for the New York Amsterdam Star News. He also contributed articles to nationally-known publications on various aspects of negro life.

Roi Ottley, being a member of the race about which he writes, lacks neither information nor writing ability. "New World A-Coming" is a history of the author's race as it began in Harlem and as it is today in Harlem. Many of the famous characters about which he writes he has known intimately, as well as the less famous ones. He has paraded behind Marcus Garvey, provisional president-general of Africa as he rode in a black Packard car through the streets of the "Black Capital." He has shouted and loyally stomped for Joe Louis, and with Father Divine he has led the heavenly life in Atlantic City at evangelical tubs, roll rim. L. E. Garcia, danced to boogie-woogie and has eaten the dishes of the chitterlings and pig's feet. He has sinned on Saturday and "praised de Lawd" on Sunday.

With Harlem as a large example of Negro life in America, this author has successfully shown in this book that mental, moral and economical standard of his race. So impersonally and objectively did he write that the reader does not realize that he is a negro. There is none of the platform lecturing about liberation for his people. He has forcefully and statistically stated his issues and has in each instance pictured the issues in their true perspective.

There are answers to many questions of first importance to a growing and deepening democracy.

Jack Thompson Seeks Re-election To Legislature

Jack Thompson, Candidate

Thompson says his aims are simple: they are to carry on his work in the legislature, as he has done, in the interest of his county and state and stressing the following:

Jobs in industry in California for our returning veterans at the end of the war, and for our present workers by providing legislation that will induce industry to remain on the Pacific coast. He is serving on a postwar committee for the purpose now.

Complete support for agriculture. He served with the committee on agriculture last session and supported the food and fibre act in its present form, and many other bills that have helped the Santa Clara county farmer. Also has supported measures which reduced the county taxes.

Maintenance and improvement of our present system of education and ample facilities to permit our service men to return to school and college.

A fair deal to labor with job insurance after the war and a fair return to industry.

Thompson is 47 years of age and was born in Cupertino, and has lived in Evergreen most of his life. He is a prune and apricot grower. He is married and the father of two children. Jack Jr. is now in the mosquito boat service in the navy in the South Pacific. His daughter, Mrs. Jack Hughes, is the wife of Lt. Jack Hughes, a navy flier who has also served in the South Pacific. His brother, H. Y. Thompson, well known in Morgan Hill and Gilroy, is also in the navy.

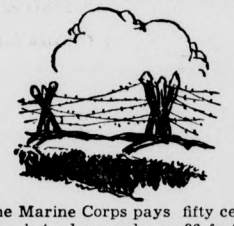
What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Barbed wire used by Uncle Sam's fighting forces is vastly different from that used on American farms. Army and Marine barbed wire is much heavier and the barbs, about three inches in length, are more vicious than ordinary barbed wire.



The Marine Corps pays fifty cents for each twelve yards, or 36 feet of this specially manufactured barbed wire. The Army and Marine Corps needs thousands upon thousands of feet for defensive warfare. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps will insure sufficient quantity for their needs. Invest at least ten percent of your wages in War Bonds every pay day.

When my son scans the sky, that he may find
Familiar constellations, when all else is strange.
Night-wind, blow gently where he sleeps;
Is it too far to bring to him
Sharp scent of sycamores, or redwoods from the canyon's rim?

Look in on him as I have always done,
If he should waken, touch him softly—(my young, dear son)
And tell him all is well.

the PIT

A GREAT RIVER GENERATES THE POWER OF HALF-MILLION HORSES

P. G. and E.'s interconnected system of more than 50,000 miles of power lines serves one million electric customers, 73,000 farms, 27,000 industries, 80 military establishments with a dependable electric supply at low rates.

Like an Indian fantasy come true, the white-maned Pit River, tamed and bridled in a chain of powerhouses, works for the farmer, the miner, the lumberman, the shipbuilder, the housewife and the armed forces—at the flip of a switch.

The Pit River Basin is one of the most remarkable and abundant sources of water in the United States. It is a land literally cushioned with water. Gigantic underground lava-rock caverns store the rains and melting snows of winter and spring. Thousands of springs drain this subterranean water into the Pit River. Here flows in one day enough water to supply all the cities of the San Francisco bay region for an entire year. During the summer low of the Sacramento River the Pit delivers by far the major portion of that stream's flow.

In the Pit Basin, this company now operates a chain of four powerhouses—Hat Creek No. 1, Hat Creek No. 2, Pit No. 1 and Pit No. 3. At Pit No. 3 the entire river is diverted into a tunnel as wide as a highway, and sent surging through the powerhouse turbines.

Pit No. 5 powerhouse, again utilizing the full flow of the river, will be connected into service within a fortnight. Thus this company's electric generating capacity from this great source of hydroelectric energy is increased to nearly HALF-MILLION HORSEPOWER.

When Pit No. 5 goes on the line the total electric capacity of this company will be raised to nearly THREE-MILLION HORSEPOWER — an amount greater than Bonneville and Grand Coulee combined.
